Creating Collaborative Solutions:
Innovations in Governance

Throughout the world, savvy public leaders are scrambling to develop and transform the capacities of old institutions to deal with today's new realities.

Creating Collaborative Solutions: Innovations in Governance is a one-week executive program designed for leaders who need to reach beyond their organizations and incorporate other institutions to solve the complex issues they face. This program examines new methods of working across traditional jurisdictions and sectors to identify, understand and address emerging social problems. While at Harvard, you will work in small groups to explore the challenges you confront in your own work and receive feedback from faculty and peers. It's an experience that can't be duplicated.

If you have any questions about the curriculum or admissions process, please email the program director Laura Bussa.

FACULTY CHAIR: Mark Moore
