that are written in these notes and things that are written because sometimes you will find that there is a difference of opinion that will sometimes occur.

Sometimes a patient will go home and he will think about something and he will come up with an example of something which he may previously have said was negative and as he reflects further upon it and the circumstances inwhich he is located, suddenly remembers that there was something that may have been positive in the past.

Q That is understandable, right?

A Yes. There are a couple of examples of that just within this page, some of which are mentioned here in this note and some of which are mentioned in my own records.

Q Can you read the notes that is included in the past medical history section.

Again, that was written by Dr. Conanan?

A That is correct. Unremarkable, nonsmoker, nondrinker, denies asbestos exposure.

Q Again, it would be a fair inference that at
