in 1946?

A Yes.

Q Now, based upon your review of the medical literature, in the 1940s up to the 1950s, did you see any published literature that criticized that finding?

A No.

Q How about in the 1950s, did you see anything in the '50s that said that conclusion that they drew, or draw or whatever was wrong?

A No.

Q Did you see anything in the early '60s that said that was wrong?

A No. No, not until the mid '60s did people look back and realize that the problem with the study was that most of the workers had only been employed for a short period of time.

Obviously they didn't start building ships for World Was II until about 1939, 1940, and if you did a study in '45, most of the people are going to have five years of exposure.
