

Monday, August 9, 1937

2:30 p.m.

Telephone call from Dr. Cannon.

Dr. Cannon reports:

Friday, August 6, 1937

Better. Was quiet all day and slept 7 hours in the night.

Saturday, August 7, 1937

Was somewhat worse and exhibited increased excitement and mental depression for 2 periods of from 15 to 20 minutes each, in the morning and the afternoon, respectively. Sleep was satisfactory Saturday night.

Sunday, August 8, 1937

Periods of excitement were evident for 2 or 3 hours in the morning, the remaining of the time patient appeared normal.

Monday, August 9, 1937

Has been much better. Manifested slight excitement for a few minutes in the morning.

For the past 3 days patient has been allowed the privilege of walking about the hospital in the company of his nurse and the mental outlook has improved considerably.

Beginning Monday night 5 grains of KI, t.i.d. has been prescribed. The response to paraldehyde has improved. Present dosage is 4 cc p.r.n.

Johnston

Has continued at work with no recurrence of symptoms.