

Wrong Ideas on Paint Economy

THERE'S one way to save on paint. That way is to use the best paint. Some think of paint economy as "cutting corners." That is wrong. Cheap paint doesn't count as much economy—you need more of it.

Cheap paint is more difficult to spread. It takes more labor to do the best paint does. So more when you're put in on the house than cheap paint does.

More than that, it takes the paint more time to dry. It's usually applied, while other paint on the average begins working in twelve hours. Cheap paint is so slow that it's more money for preventing the completion of the house.

"Cheap" paint is the only paint that really costs you anything.

Don't allow anyone to tell you that you can save on paint this way.

We've made paint for seventy years. We use pure PROMILED WHITE LEAD, you found out, and red oxide, but we use them in scientific proportions with long-time skill.

Our white lead has been in the ground so long through a rich process with GLASS added to the mixture. That means covering rapidly and ease of spreading. We especially like to make it "white" which means cleanest white.

The finished product on the house is a beautiful, durable, tough substance lasting. We call these paints "Fuller's" because the "House Painter" knows they are the way to make for the people.
