Re: James Spicer

Dear Dr. Scott:

██████████ now weighs 181 pounds whereas the ideal weight for his height is 170 pounds. He feels well and has had no important symptomology.

I suggest that he return to full activity. Naturally he should have no exposure to lead, since he is invalided for so long following what seems to be less exposure than the average man needs to develop lead poisoning.

He has not yet recovered from his anemia. I submitted a specimen for a coproporphyrin determination to the Kettering Laboratory today. It would be of interest to see him in a month and repeat the blood and urine studies, but I do not consider this essential from the Company standpoint. It would be of interest to us because of our desire to learn more about unusual cases.

Thank you for referring him to me for study.

Sincerely yours,

Henry W. Ryder, M. D.
