Today on Climate Beat . . .

. . . we went overseas, noting that a manufacturer group is asking the Department of Energy to issue a moratorium on exporting liquified natural gas (LNG) to countries that do not have a free-trade agreement with the United States, after a court rejected environmentalists' challenge to an LNG export terminal over climate concerns.

Playing the numbers game, one group estimates that a court's vacatur of Obama EPA limits on hydrofluorocarbons (HFCs) could allow more than 3.6 billion metric tons of greenhouse gas emissions by 2050 that would have been avoided under the regulations.

And on the science front, our daily news roundup looked at the "broad power" that the White House has to undercut a major federal climate science report that is required to be published next year.
