have any evidence today and so your weekend will be extended for an additional day.

I know you are all going to be real disappointed with that news. I was even going to take the candy bucket away from you.

(Whereupon, laughter ensued.)

THE COURT: I notice you are passing that around before I get a chance to finish the announcement.

In any event, because of certain developments over the weekend, we will not have any evidence presented today, and you will have the balance of the day off and you will be permitted to keep the money you got paid this morning.

I know that is tough to take. I know you want me to get the cashier here and line up so she can take back all of that money she gave you. I can see all of you digging in your pockets.

(Whereupon, laughter ensued.)

THE COURT: In any event, you will have an extra day off.