Dear Mr. Loder:

I am sending you herewith a copy of a letter which I received this morning, together with a copy of a reply which I have made to Dr. Bedell. As you will see, this reply is non-committal but I did not feel that I could show Dr. Bedell the discourtesy of neglecting some kind of reply.

You will note in the first paragraph of Dr. Bedell's letter, reference to my suggestion that some settlement could be made without litigation. For obvious reasons I did what I could to see that the matter should be settled without litigation, and I assured Dr. Bedell that I would do so. I had every reason to believe at that time that this could be done, and that, indeed, any sensible industrial organization would wish to make such a settlement in fairness to everybody.

I know of nothing I can do beyond what I have done, but if you have suggestions to make concerning anything which I might do, I would appreciate it.

Very truly yours,

RAK:is

Dear Doctor Bedell:

I regret very much indeed that some settlement has not been made long ago for the benefit of the family of Mr. [REDACTED]. At the moment I am not prepared to say what I can do to settle the matter, but I will look into the situation and if there is anything I can do, you may rest assured that it will be done.

Sincerely yours,

RAK:is
