Thank you both for everything this past week. Do you all have good mailing addresses for yourselves?

Alan Matheson, executive director of the state Department of Environmental Quality, told reporters about the letter after Pruitt left the state Capitol.

Originally, Matheson said, the EPA mandated pollution controls beyond those the state offered in its proposed Regional Haze plan, believing it would result in small improvements in the visibility around national parks within the vicinity of Rocky Mountain Power's Hunter and Huntington plants in Emery County.
