diers who had been drinking on duty and employes of foreign firms from whom the gendarmes were trying to obtain information regarding the activities of the foreigners. I talked to many of these prisoners and found their regard for the police was little higher than my own.

Once a gendarme officer beat a Japanese soldier into insensibility because the soldier had called him the one profane word in the Japanese language, "baka," which stands for anything from "fool" to the equivalent of some of the worst profane phrases in the English language.

The Japanese gendarmerie, profoundly secret in its organization, corresponds in many respects to the German Gestapo. I think it is safe to say that it contains all the criminal elements in the military establishment. The members' power appeared unlimited and they often boasted they could arrest even high Japanese military officers, but I have never heard of this happening. SENT TO NEW PRISON.

On February 26 as a group of about 10 gendarmes came to the prison walls and read the names of eight foreigners, including myself, to whom they told to go to the out-gendarmerie office. There we were informed we were to be taken to another prison at Kiangwan, where we would be subjected to a court martial on a charge of espionage.

Each was given a shave and a haircut, and then we were taken in a truck to Kiangwan, where a new prison had been built beside a main highway. This prison consisted of solitary cells about five feet wide and ten feet long, entered by a door about four feet high.

The door had a slot at the bot-
