I was sure of the longitude now. We were then in 151.25 west Greenwich. Honolulu is in 158 something. Satisfied that we had a long way to go and uncertain of the latitude, but reasonably sure that we were well to the north of Oahu Island. By this time it would be noon and felt reasonably sure of being able to observe the meridian passage of the sun, determine the latitude and then proceed. So we steered to make 250 course true. At about 11 o'clock Martin sent word that he thought his oil was exhausted, and said, "I do not think there is any land here. Get the boat ready. Can't you get the latitude now?" I said: "No—keep on going west." By 12 o'clock figured that we were about in the longitude of Oahu Island. Obtained the desired latitude and steered to make 200 true. We had 180 miles to go and told Martin to keep going for two hours and he would see land.

Sighted Oahu

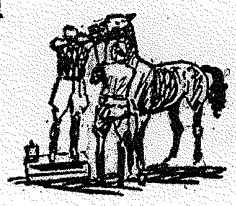

We sighted Oahu Island at 1:30 p. m., heavy clouds hanging over the high hills made visibility poor. About 2:05 p. m. Honolulu time, we passed over land. I put on my shoes and other clothing and America," speaking.

Besieged with the prospects of various promoters, 16-year-old Lois Delander of Joliet, Illinois, newly crowned "Miss America," was busy bundling up her trophies today to rush back to school.

Lois was somewhat alarmed over the possibility that she might already be late for school, and with the business of winning the annual Atlantic City beauty review disposed of, the big problem on hand was the immediate return to her "art course."

While the "simplicity and charm," with which the judges found her amply equipped, might stand her in good stead for a movie or stage career, Miss Delander said her sole inclination is "art."

Judge Blames Parents For Children Drinking

BAKERSFIELD (Calif.), Sept. 10.—If "flaming youth" drinks bootleg liquor and otherwise conducts unwisely, at least one California judge is going to place the blame where he says it belongs—on the parents or guardians.

This was made clear today by Judge Erwin Owen, presiding over the Kern county juvenile court. During a hearing at which he was asked to send some young offenders to the reform school, Judge Owen created a sensation when he declared that he had no intention of doing any such thing, as he did not hold them responsible.

Instead, he turned upon the parents of the young people and criticized them severely.

At the conclusion of his remarks, Judge Owen ordered that twelve copies of today's court record be furnished by the stenographers and forwarded to every minister and local official in the city of Delano.

The young people brought before him were alleged to have been drinking bootleg liquor and otherwise conducting in a manner which would tend to produce delinquency.

"I am not casting any reflection upon the city of Delano," said Judge Owen, "or upon its residents but I am blaming the small number of persons directly responsible for the conduct of these children.

"It is not my intention to fill the reform schools at Ventura with girls nor the Preston and Whittier schools with boys for such offenses as long as the people don't punish the real offenders."

He added that if children were found drinking intoxicating liquor the basic blame rested not essentially with the children, but with those in charge of the children, and perhaps the authorities in the district where the children lived.
