HOUSING NEED JUST RELATIVE

"Our housing shortage is actually a measure of today's high standard of living," Morgan L. Fitch, President of the National Association of Real Estate Board's, said recently in New York.

"We never actually ran out (of houses)," he said. "Our houses were not used up or destroyed during the war. On the contrary we put them in better condition during the war years, and we ended the war with more dwellings per thousand of population than we had at the time of Pearl Harbor—in spite of the tremendous increase in the rate of marriages and births.

"But, like the automobile producers, we haven't yet caught up with the great demand made possible by 60,000,000 jobs and an all-time high level of earnings. Our opportunities will come in catching up—in getting rid of scarcity—in building, selling and renting homes to the public that now demands more housing and better housing than ever before.

The living room in the small house usually must serve as a hall between the main entrance, kitchen, dining space and between the bedroom and bathroom.
