Dear Fellow Employee:

I want to take this opportunity to congratulate and thank you for working six months without a disabling injury.

This is a very difficult accomplishment, especially with the rapid growth of our plant in the last few years; the increase in personnel to over 1,000 employees, and the new processes that are so unfamiliar to many of us. It is evident that each one of you is accepting the individual responsibility for his own safety that is so very important to a safety program.

In appreciation for your efforts, you will receive a gift of your choice. Enclosed is a list of prizes from which you may make your selection.

Our next goal is May 15, 1969, at which time, if we have not had a disabling injury, we will all receive another gift in addition to the more important one of not having been injured on the job. Why not make each day a goal in itself by promising yourself at the beginning that you will complete the day without an injury.

Best wishes,

A. T. Raetzsch
Works Manager
