To Members of the Health and Safety Committee:

This is being sent to you as an example of the current interest that we find in all aspects of environmental health, particularly our own lead hygiene situation. If you have any comments relative to the position we have taken here, I would be pleased to receive them.

You will remember the pottery investigation at present being carried on by the Kettering Laboratory and which we discussed at our Health and Safety Committee Meeting, and which investigation has not yet been completed. However, the results so far show that low-fired glasses do tend to be generally more soluble.

Very truly yours,

Don G. Fowler
