organic matter. Heavy clay and adobe soils drain slowly while very sandy soil drains too quickly. Both of these soils should be improved by the addition of a good organic humus material before the bulbs are planted. If you are planting your bulbs in a special bed you can add the humus material by spreading it three to four inches thick over the surface of the bed and dig it in to a depth of ten to twelve inches. We like to spread a controlled release fertilizer over the humus before digging it in as then we are sure our bulb plants will be adequately fed. Follow the directions on the label for pre-planting applications.

If you are planting your bulbs singly or in clusters of a half dozen or so between shrubs you can gauge the amount of humus needed by the shovelfull. For every two shovelfulls of earth use one shovelful of humus material. Last year when we did this we added one table-spoonful of controlled release fertilizer for each bulb to the soil that went into the bottom half of the hole and we have never had such beautiful, long-stemmed tulips.

There are many kinds of organic humus material available.
