Section 51 does not protect you against mobs. It affords protection only against official—that is, federal or state—abuse. Yet most civil rights complaints are against an act of one person against another person, or of a group of persons (like a mob) against one person.

Section 51 does protect you against private individuals as well as public officials in these rights:

To be free from involuntary servitude; to be a witness in federal courts; to be protected in carrying out federal court decrees; to run for and hold federal office; to be protected from violence while in the custody of federal authorities; to have access to the federal courts, and to vote for a federal officer and to have that vote counted as cast.

SECTION 52
Section 52 empowers the federal government to prosecute a state or federal officer who willfully misuses his office or power to deprive a person of the rights guaranteed by the Bill of Rights and the 14th amendment.

Congress on several occasions has been asked to pass anti-lynching legislation. But a bill of this type has never been enacted. Such a bill, says the Civil Rights Section, would be a new civil rights statute. The section says all antilynching bills were aimed at enforcing the 14th amendment, which says an individual cannot be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of
