Gentlemen:

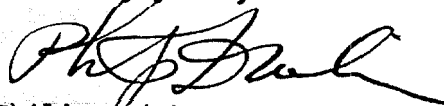

All of you know the general plans for an amalgamation of the Journal of Industrial Hygiene and Occupational Medicine. This will take place in actuality with the July, 1949 issue of this Journal. On that date, the American Medical Association becomes our publisher and continues the 1949 Volume to completion.

On January 1, 1950, the new Journal, to be called Archives of Industrial Hygiene and Occupational Medicine, will appear, I serving as Editor-in-Chief with an editorial staff to include, subject to the final approval of the American Medical Association, you four gentlemen, two others to be nominated by the Council on Industrial Health of the American Medical Association, and probably three or more foreign representatives, these to be:

Professor Sven Forsman of Stockholm
Dr. Jan Muller of Czechoslovakia
Dr. Leo Noro of Helsinki, Finland
Dr. Thomas Bedford, Medical Research Council of London

Your duties as an associate editor will consist mainly in reading critically and commenting upon papers submitted. There will be no fees for this work, but all mailing expenses will be defrayed by the publication. As editors, you will receive a copy of the Journal. Will you accept this assignment?

Sincerely yours,

Philip Drinker
