Dear Sir:

In case you are not familiar with our organization, we are a non-profit, independent, science oriented center which concerns itself with various public interest issues.

~~10~~ We are deeply concerned with the use of lead in paint and specifically lead in marine antifouling paint. We realize that you are equally as concerned and would help us greatly with regards to this matter. In order to further our research, could you please send us any information you have on lead in paint (specifically antifouling paint)? We are especially interested in the environmental effects, for example, the percentage of antifouling paints containing lead, the amount of the paint which wears off over a certain period of time, etc. Also, will you sell your lead to any buyer, no matter what he does with it? And do you know what the company you sell your lead to does with it? Finally, what are you doing about the problem of lead in the environment?

Thank you for your cooperation.

Sincerely,

James Warlick
